Die Sprechstunden sind an den Anschlagtafeln und an den Türen der Sekretariate und der wissenschaftlichen MitarbeiterInnen zu finden - bitte notieren Sie sich diese gleich zu Beginn des Semesters. In der vorlesungsfreien Zeit gelten andere Sprechstunden.

Wichtig!

Veranstaltungen mit dem gleichen Titel werden als Parallelveranstaltungen geführt, nur eine davon ist zu besuchen. Die Anmeldung für alle Kurse erfolgt online über ILIAS ab dem 13. März 2017.

ZUR TEILNAHME AN DEN VERANSTALTUNGEN:

Es liegt in Ihrem eigenen Interesse, regelmäßig anwesend zu sein. Die VeranstaltungsleiterInnen behalten sich vor, die Teilnahme durch Eintragung in Anwesenheitslisten zu überprüfen. Studierende, die mehr als dreimal unentschuldigt in einer Veranstaltung fehlen, können nicht ohne Weiteres mit einem Schein rechnen.

Bitte wenden Sie sich mit allen Ihr Studium betreffenden Fragen an die MitarbeiterInnen während der Sprechstunden.

Eine allgemeine Einführungsveranstaltung für StudienanfängerInnen findet nur im Wintersemester statt.

Die Sekretariate der Anglistik/Amerikanistik finden Sie hier: Linguistik: Keplerstrasse 17, Etage 4b, Zimmer 4.057; Literaturwissenschaft NEL: Keplerstrasse 17, Etage 4a, Zimmer 4.029; Amerikanistik: Keplerstrasse 17, Etage 4a, Zimmer 4.022.

Bitte beachten: Änderungen der Raum- und Zeitangaben sind im Einzelfall nicht ausgeschlossen. Bitte beachten Sie daher dringend entsprechende Aushänge am Schwarzen Brett und den Anschlagtafeln.

Beginn unserer Veranstaltungen: Montag, 10.04.2017

BITTE BEACHTEN:

Studierende der Anglistik haben drei verschiedene Studiengänge zur Wahl: Lehramt (Staatsexamen, diverse Prüfungsordnungen), Bachelor of Arts (alte und neue Prüfungsordnung) und Master of Arts. Die Anforderungen sind für alle vier Abschlussarten unterschiedlich und sollten der jeweiligen Prüfungsordnung entnommen werden.

!!!WICHTIG!!!

Seit dem Sommersemester 2016 besteht das Modul 'Formal Basis' aus dem gleichnamigen Seminar und einem dazugehörigen wöchentlichen Tutorium.

LINGUISTIK

Formal Basis
ECTS: 2	Requirements: t. b. a.

	DO	08.00 – 09.30	17.74

This course investigates the syntactic structure of English sentences and it also provides a comprehensive introduction to morphological analysis. The seminar has a strong practical focus; the students will learn to apply syntactic and morphological argumentation themselves.

There will be additional tutorials where exercises will be discussed. Regular attendance is compulsory. Please register for one of the tutorials on ILIAS.

In this course we will first get acquainted with basic semantic notions like the difference between sense and reference (e.g. the German chancellor vs. Angela Merkel), semantic classes of verbs/predicates, tense, aspect and modality. In the end we will be able to theoretically explain, for instance, why the English progressive is compatible with some verbs, but not with others: compare "John is driving a car" with "*John is owning a car". In addition, we will set the grounds for a formal approach to natural language semantics by determining the kind of objects words may refer to and how we can combine them to derive the interpretation of sentences. For this, we will introduce and make use of basic notions of set theory and predicate logic.

Syntactic Theory (B)

The aim of this seminar is to learn how to think syntactically. After reviewing your syntactic knowledge from previous courses, we will see how we can argue for or against a given syntactic model. We will be looking at how Government and Binding (GB) has dealt with certain syntactic phenomena, and we will then see how these phenomena can be accounted for in a minimalist framework. In detail, we will be dealing with binding, case, the internal structure of the NP, control vs. raising, and with a special emphasis, we will look into the internal make-up of the VP arguing for a more elaborated structure (VP, vP, VoiceP) than so far assumed.

Language Variation: Dialectology

Fabian SCHUBÖDO 11.30 – 13.00*17.74

English varies greatly both within the British Isles and across the world. The course takes a closer look at the different causes for variation within English, taking geographical, sociological and historical aspects into consideration. Different case studies on varieties of English from all over the world will be presented in detail, based on classical readings in the field of English dialectology in the widest sense. The focus is on variation in phonology.

To what extent do languages differ syntactically from one another? How can this be implemented in syntactic theory? These are the central questions with which this seminar is concerned. To this end, we will take a closer look at selected constructions in particular in the Germanic languages and see how they differ. Then, we will discuss which tools syntactic theory has provided to account for (these instances of) crosslinguistic variation. Good basic knowledge of syntax is obligatory; preparatory reading assignments will be announced on ILIAS in due time!

Janina RADOFR*09.45 – 11.15*17.74

In this course we will take a closer look at particular syntactic constructions in order to investigate different forms of variation: cross-linguistic variation (within the Germanic languages), variation between different varieties of English, and historical change. In addition to the empirical comparison we will also examine how this variation can be captured in different theoretical approaches.

Good basic knowledge of syntax is required.

Readings will be announced in class.

After an introduction to the phonetics and phonology of intonation and issues concerning the acquisition of intonation in a second language (L2), this advanced seminar will analyze data by German speakers of English with respect to intonation (including focus/givenness and sentence mode). Participants in the course are required to transcribe and annotate L2 speech data, analyze the data within current theories of intonation, and present and discuss their data in class.

Literature will be announced in class.

Phonological structures are regularly studied in the context of creating lexical and occasionally morphological or sentential contrasts. However, phonetic and phonological variation can also be observed at the level of language use in human interaction: for example, in indicating politeness, or in helping guide smooth turn-taking between conversational participants. In this course, we will investigate the relationships between phonological and other linguistic mechanisms for organizing speech at the levels of discourse and interaction. We will particularly focus on the intonational marking of politeness, topic, and turn structure, considering how these features interplay with other prosodic aspects of speech, and how they vary across languages. A good knowledge of basic phonology is necessary for this course; prior knowledge of intonation and prosody is desirable.

The aim of this seminar is to make students familiar with current syntactic developments and syntactic discussion and argumentation. After introducing the core ideas of Minimalism, we will read and discuss syntactic literature on extraposition. This means that we will take a look at sentences in which a relatively heavy constituent is placed to the right of its canonical position (= it is extraposed); cf. (1) vs. (2). We will read and discuss different analyses of these constructions. Good knowledge of syntax is obligatory!

- (1) The claim [_{CP} that the world was round] was made by the Greeks.
 (2) Extraposition:
 The claim t_1 was made by the Greeks [_{CP1} that the world was round].

Master Wirtschaftspädagogik:	Kernmodul 4 „Linguistik“: HS English Language

Janina RADODI 14.00 – 15.30*17.98

The course consists of two parts. First we will examine the structure of words and their representation in the brain. Then we will turn to sentences, discuss their structural properties and take a closer look at the processing of certain syntactic constructions. Some of the questions we will address are: What is the difference between grammaticality and acceptability? Why are certain types of constructions difficult to process? How does the human sentence processing mechanism recover from an incorrect analysis of a sentence? How incremental is sentence interpretation? Are lexical and structural ambiguities processed the same way?

Good knowledge of morphology and syntax is required.
Readings will be announced in class.

In this course, we will practice different aspects of English pronunciation that prototypically cause problems for German native speakers, and we will concentrate on the two reference varieties of English which are expected for teaching English at German schools: General American (GA) and Received Pronunciation (RP). We will approach this from a phonetic/phonological perspective (e.g., phonetic transcription, articulatory description of individual speech sounds, connected speech phenomena) in order to raise awareness for one's potential problem areas and offer some guidance as to how they might be approached.

This course is about grammar: teaching it and using it. We will spend roughly the first third of the course discussing teaching methods and evaluating lesson plans for use in a school setting. The remainder of the course will be made up of teaching sessions in which the students will teach a grammar topic. Grades will be determined based on the students' performance in the teaching session and the associated lesson plan.

Important: This course is for Lehramt students only. It is a required course for students under the new Lehramt system, where it comprises half of your Sprachpraxis 3 module. Because of the way the class is taught, the size of the class will be strictly limited to 20 students. Lehramt students who need this course for their Sprachpraxis 3 module have priority.

The course is based upon a lexical approach to vocabulary acquisition as well as its phraseological context. Through written and oral exercises, students will explore the English language focusing on typical usages/sequences, collocations, idioms, phrasal verbs, slang, and multi-word units. Practical examples of modern-day language usage (through articles and worksheets) will be covered. Grades will be determined by two in-class examinations.
